The purpose of this introduction is to provide the reader with basic theological, historical, and literary information on the twenty-seven writings of the NT. This monograph is the culmination of professor Holladay's thirty years of experience teaching the NT to seminary and college students. The book includes material found in traditional NT introductions.

This is confirmed by the frequent usage of the introductory formula, "The kingdom of heaven is like. . . ." The reason for the centrality of the kingdom in the parables is the priority it held in Jesus' entire ministry. It was the message of John (Matt. 3:2), Jesus (4:17), and the disciples (10:5-7).

But many New Testament interpreters would disagree. In recent generations, and still today, various writers claiming scholarly support have argued notions such as the following: The New
