If the selected column is first, count three cards off deck and the fourth card will be the selected card. If it's second, show the 11th card; if it's third, show the 18th card. 3: After the second deal, pick up the selected -card column first (so that it's is on top of the deck).

10/10/2011 · The Deck of Illusions is kind of the ugly, unloved twin to the Deck of Many Things. Whilst it shares the same design - pull a card from a deck to produce a random, magical effect - there's none of the risk that makes Deck of Many Things so thrilling to use. Essentially, all the cards are the same.
