The rotor shaft position is sensed by a Hall Effect sensor, a slotted optical disk or some other transducer, providing signals as represented. The signals are decoded by combinational logic to provide the firing signals for 120° conduction on each of the three phases [1]. The commutation logic or rotor position decoder therefore has six

Situational factors, such as being on the losing end of a power asymmetry, could lead to increased belief in conspiracy theories (Uscinski & Parent, 2014). Uscinski and Parent argue that conspiracy theories are for “losers” and tend to accuse those in power and their coalitions. Examining letters to the editor of the New York Times spanning 1890–2010, they found
