Hello, I'm on a Mac running EN10.16, I've been a paid user for 10+ years and can no longer find where to convert a note to a PDF. It's moved around over the years and been called, convert, export, print/PDF, etc. but I've always been able to find it and adjust my workflow as needed.

Evernote can store images (and yes, index and search text in those images...) and PDF files (which, again, it can index and search too). So I didn't take out my notetaker wallet to copy down the addition to the opening times of the nearby swimming pool; I snapped a photo with the low-res CMOS camera built-in to most cellphones today and emailed it to my 14/3/2017 · One common use of Evernote for me is to scan in paper documents (I like the Scannable app on my iPad), put the PDF or JPG into Evernote, and then shred the original. It makes going almost-paperless very easy, and best of all I can search up these documents later. Evernote's search is unbelievably fast and accurate.
