Christians do grieve—and we should, because death was not part of God's original plan. We know that death exists because sin has entered our world. Death should make us angry. It should make us sad. But we do not grieve as if we have no hope. We have hope because we trust in the God who made us and the rest of the world.

30/9/2010 · No death, no resurrection. And unless the Lord comes very soon (I think he may and I hope he does), that will be the way most of us will end our earthly journey. Someway, somehow, someday we'll die. And whoever is around at that moment will take us to the mortuary where the undertaker will do what he does to prepare us for our burial.

1/7/2021 · The death of a child takes an extreme toll on the body. Science has shown that a loss of this magnitude is similar to a major physical injury, so you absolutely need rest. Give in to the urge to sleep if you have it; otherwise, try to establish a nighttime routine--warm bath, herbal tea, relaxation exercises--that can help ease you into a good night's sleep.

20/1/2021 · 2. There Is No Night Without A Dawning by Helen Steiner Rice. This short poem is a popular choice for funerals because it reminds us that despite the death of someone we cared about, the darkness of our grief will pass. Whilst death is hard to bear at first, this poem tells us that those who have died have found peace in a "brighter day."

6/5/2021 · If your spouse died suddenly and there were no final requests, explore ideas to honor the memory of your late partner. This may give you a peace of mind, and will ensure that you will not have any mental obstacles in your new life. You can make this a recurring practice, or you may wish to honor your spouse once and then do your best to move on.
