'Scram', broadcast over the helicopter control radio net during the Falklands War thirty years ago in 1982 meant 'take cover from Argentine fighters'. This call was a regular feature of life down south, especially during the first six days after we landed while the Royal Navy fought and won the Battle of San Carlos Water; arguably the toughest fight by British ships against enemy air since ...

I have read a lot of books about the Falklands war but this volume provided a fresh perspective on the campaign in general and on helicopter operations in particular. The author was a late-comer to the war and did not witness first-hand many of the operations described, but his own experience has enabled him to convey these third-party accounts with insight and depth.
